SPECTRALLY CONSTRAINED IMPULSE SHORTENING FILTER FOR A DISCRETE MULTI-TONE RECEIVER

Abstract

A channel in a multiple carrier communication system is equalized by computing a target spectral response, shortening the impulse response of the channel so that a significant part of an energy of the impulse response is confined to a region that is shorter than a target length and filtering the signal based on the target spectral response.